“ You were such an amazing man. I don't have words to express how grateful I am to of had you in my life. As well as to have you love me and my son,the way you did. It was an undying love, a love I never knew existed. And I will forever hold a very very special place in my heart for you. You meant the world to me, and although we may have parted for now, I know I will see you again one day soon. I love you so very much Ronnie.~Death leaves a heartache no one can heal, love leaves a memory no one can steal.~~If tears could build a stairway,And memories a lane,I'd walk right up to HeavenAnd bring you home again.~

ME

“ You sound like such a lovely and strong person. My heart & thoughts go out to you and I hope it is a very long time yet before your service takes place! What you have described sounds ideal, having people share their stories and memories of you as opposed to something that is purely religiously based and not very personal.Also reading your story makes me realise how lucky I am to have good overall health.I don't think people appreciate their health until they or someone they love are sick.I have a 21 month old daughter and I have been very lucky with her overall health.She has a chest cold at the moment and is wheezy & breathless and it breaks my heart to hear her struggle for her breath at times.I honestly don't know how I would cope if she were diagnosed with an illness that would affect her for life, your parents, like you must be very strong people.Bless you and wishing you many happy times ahead for your future.Jade xox
