“ Deborah Palmour? Sally Matthews 4 mins ♦ Edited ♦ My best memory is when Bob, Jimmy, & I would go down to the creek and look at all the tadpoles turning into frogs. We'd catch a few, examine them and throw them back in. We'd stay there for hours, molding things out of the sandstone clay that formed the edge of the creek bed, to trying to make whistles out of the bamboo stalks on the other side of the creek. Good time.

“ *” ” ” ” Jim and I met when early in life and were childhood friends. I remember spending, what seems like, most everyday with Jim and the other kids that we grew up with until we were all out of high school. Living by Mingo creek, we fished, swam, went roller skating, and road our bicycles/motorcycles all over east Tulsa until the wheels fell off. My memories of Jim are vivid and many to say the least and that only happens in life with people that make lasting impressions. Jim and I weren't in close contact much the last several years, but I was able to catch Jim on the phone, it was just like we were kids again. Always the prankster, we liked to talk about all of the funny things we did as kids growing up, and laughed just like kids do. It is rare to have friends that are exactly like family, Jim was one of those amazing few. I only wish that I had the ability to show and tell you everything that I remember about my friend Jim. The pictures here of his life spark even more emotion and lasting memories for me. If you knew him, I'm sure he did the same thing to you. Rest in peace Jim, you will always be just like a brother.
