“ I will be forever thankful for the moments I shared with my dad. He loved telling me about his garden and how, whenever possible he selected the Darlene variety to plant so that he could think of me while nurturing and tending to his garden. He often complimented me. He told me he was proud of the woman I'd become and regretted that he was not involved in my life. He talked of how he was in awe of how I raised my two sons and that he was honored to be Cody and Taylors grandfather. I adored how he thought we looked alike especially our smiles. He would say I was a much prettier version of him and then he would chuckle. I will miss that silly laugh of his. On many occasions he confessed to be a romantic. The times when he wasn't able to express himself he would ask me to listen to the lyrics of specific songs. The last song he asked me to listen to was, You Can Only Hurt The Ones You Love. That song was never more appropriate than now. Daddy, I will miss you. Love forever, Darlene
